THE CHRONICLES AND MEMORIALS
OF
GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND
DURING THE MIDDLE AGES.

PUBLISHED BY THE AUTHORITY OF HER MAJESTY'S TREASURY, UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE MASTER OF THE ROLLS.

---

ON the 26th of January 1857, the Master of the Rolls submitted to the Treasury a proposal for the publication of materials for the History of this Country from the Invasion of the Romans to the Reign of Henry VIII.

The Master of the Rolls suggested that these materials should be selected for publication under competent editors without reference to periodical or chronological arrangement, without mutilation or abridgment, preference being given, in the first instance, to such materials as were most scarce and valuable.

He proposed that each chronicle or historical document to be edited should be treated in the same way as if the editor were engaged on an Editio Princeps; and for this purpose the most correct text should be formed from an accurate collation of the best MSS.

To render the work more generally useful, the Master of the Rolls suggested that the editor should give an account of the MSS. employed by him, of their age and their peculiarities; that he should add to the work a brief account of the life and times of the author, and any remarks necessary to explain the chronology; but no other note or comment was to be allowed, except what might be necessary to establish the correctness of the text.

The works to be published in octavo, separately, as they were finished; the whole responsibility of the task resting upon the editors, who were to be chosen by the Master of the Rolls with the sanction of the Treasury.

The Lords of Her Majesty's Treasury, after a careful consideration of the subject, expressed their opinion in a Treasury Minute, dated February 9, 1857, that the plan recommended by the Master of the Rolls "was well calculated for the accomplishment of this important national object, in an effectual and satisfactory manner, within a reasonable time, and provided proper attention be paid to economy, in making the detailed arrangements, without unnecessary expense."

They expressed their approbation of the proposal that each chronicle and historical document should be edited in such a manner as to represent with all possible correctness the text of each writer, derived from a collation of the best MSS., and that no notes should be added, except such as were illustrative of the various readings. They suggested, however, that the preface to each work should contain, in addition to the particulars proposed by the Master of the Rolls, a biographical account of the author, so far as authentic materials existed for that purpose, and an estimate of his historical credibility and value.

A PORTION of the “Annales Cambriæ,” i.e., down to A.D. 1066, was printed some years ago in the “Monumenta Historica Britannica,” under the able editorship of the late Henry Petrie, Esq., F.S.A., Keeper of the Records in the Tower of London.<sup>1</sup> The plan adopted by the promoters of that great work assigned the Norman conquest as the historical limit of the first volume; but as only one volume was ever published, the consequence was that the chronicle in question, as well as several others, remained imperfect. When, however, the Lords of Her Majesty’s Treasury in 1857 gave their sanction to the publication of materials for the history of this country from the invasion of the Romans to the reign of Henry VIII., under the direction of the Master of the Rolls, it was thought desirable that a complete edition of the “Annales” should be issued, and appear in the series which is now in course of coming out.

The result is the present volume, which, though of small dimensions, is nevertheless highly interesting, and of considerable value, as being, perhaps, the oldest chronicle of Welsh affairs that we possess. It is derived from three different copies, which, for the purpose of reference, we have distinguished respectively by the letters A., B., and C. We did not consider it advisable to deviate from, or to alter in any respect, the groundwork laid down in the Monumenta Historica; the undertaking, therefore, is to be regarded simply as the completion of what was begun there.

Descrip-

manuscript

A. is a manuscript in the Harleian Collection, No. 3,859, on vellum, in octavo, of the latter part of the tenth or beginning of the eleventh century, inserted without title or introduction in the body of a manuscript of Nennius. It is followed immediately by the pedigree<sup>1</sup> of Owain, son of Howel the Good, and his mother Elen, which gives us reason further for supposing the chronicle in question to have been originally compiled during the sway of that prince. Howel died A.D. 948, when his sons, four in number, Owain, Rhun, Roderic, and Edwin, divided among them the kingdom of South Wales and Powys; North Wales being ruled over by Ieuav and Iago, sons of Idwal Voel. Between the two families there was a very severe struggle for the supremacy, and several bloody battles were fought with various results. Under these circumstances it was very natural that publicity should be given to Owain's regal claims, as genealogically derived through both his parents from the ancient monarchs of the land. The officer, whose province it was to keep a register of births, marriages, and deaths, was the bard, who, being already in possession of a maintenance of five free acres of land in virtue of his profession, received, moreover, in consideration of this special act, a pecuniary fee according to the social position of the head of the household which he visited.<sup>1</sup> As the bard was an officer of the court, it is but fair to suppose that the genealogist was Owain's own bard, one who enjoyed a more honourable post than fell to the lot of the itinerant Cler; a supposition further corroborated by the knowledge of Latin which he evidently possessed.

Now, if this manuscript is not a mere transcript, which there is no reason to suspect, inasmuch as both the chronicle and the pedigree are written in the same hand, it follows that the genealogist was also the compiler of the chronicle; and with propriety would he be so; for, as we learn from the ancient laws of Wales,

The genealogist of Owain, son of Howel the Good, supposed to be the compiler.

<sup>1</sup> See Ancient Laws and Institutions of Wales, printed under the direction of the Commissioners on the public records of the kingdom, MDCCCXLI. Also Statutes of Gruffudd, son of Cynan, and Bleddyn, son of Cynvyn, MS.

“ the three records of the bards of the Isle of Britain “ are the genealogy of descent by marriages, territorial “ divisions, and praiseworthy actions and sciences.”<sup>1</sup>
 The family registers of the princes and other great men of the land would naturally form the basis of a national chronicle, such as the “ Annales Cambriæ.”

The compiler supposed also to be an ecclesiastic.

It is very possible, moreover, that the compiler was also an ecclesiastic, for men in holy orders were frequently found to be members likewise of the bardic profession. But we can hardly suppose that he was an Englishman, because Owain had, for some reason or other, a great antipathy to the Saxon clergy and monks, which he carried out to such lengths as even to destroy the Welsh colleges which harboured them.
 Thus it is related of him in one copy of the “ Brut
 “ y Tywysogion : ” — “ A.D. 959, Owain, son of Howel
 “ the Good, demolished the college of Llanilltud in “ Gorwennydd, because there were found in it gentle“ men scholars who were Saxons, and from thence he “ proceeded to the college of Cattwg in Nantgarvan, “ and furiously demolished it.”<sup>2</sup>

The chronicle
 written probably
 in South Wales.

The chronicle under consideration was in all probability written in South Wales, for it notices events connected with that part of the country more particularly than it does those of North Wales. This circumstance in some degree corroborates the supposition that the compiler was attached to the interests of Owain, who had no actual jurisdiction in North Wales.

The principal scholars of South Wales at that time.

We naturally inquire who were the most distinguished scholars of South Wales at this period? The interval between the sixth and the twelfth centuries was singularly barren of literary names ; nevertheless, during that period, and about the time in which the chronicle seems to have been compiled, we meet with two scholars that would have done honour to any age, Blegewryd, archdeacon of Llandaf, and Geraint the Blue Bard, both being the brothers of Morgan, king of Glamorgan. Blegewryd was a doctor both of the civil and ecclesiastical law, and on that account was chosen as the "ysgolhaig" or secretary, when the ancient laws of Wales were undergoing a revision by command of Howel the Good. That he was acquainted with the Latin tongue is attested by the fact that a set of Latin verses is attributed to him in the preamble to one copy of Howel's laws.<sup>1</sup> In that respect, therefore, as well as from being in the favour of Howel, he was well qualified to be the writer of the "Annales Cambriæ." Geraint was a poet and grammarian of note. A fragmentary document printed in the Iolo MSS. volume thus speaks of him:—"The oldest system on record of memorials and recollections is that of Geraint the Blue Bard upon poetic metres, and of all that is extant from before his time there is nothing remaining except what may be discerned by the learned by means of books. This Geraint was brother to Morgan the Aged, king of Glamorgan, and he collected ancient records of poetry and bardism, and arranged them in a book of his own composition, and established them by the laws of the chair and the Gorsedd, in every country and dominion in Wales; and Geraint excelled in knowledge and judgment, and every chair

<sup>1</sup> "Here are the verses composed by Blegewryd thereupon, in testimony of that event:—

Explicit editus legibus liber bene finitus,
 Quem regi scripsit Blangoridus, et quoque fuit
 Hweli turbe doctor, tunc legibus in vrbe
 Cornando cano, tunc iudice cotidiano
 Rex dabit ad partem dexteram nam sumerat artem."

In the same preamble Blegewryd is described as "the most learned in all Cymru."—Ancient Laws, &c., vol. i. pp. 341, 343.

“ in Wales and England was given to him, from which “ he was called the Blue Bard of the Chair. After this “ he became domestic bard to Alfred, king of England,
 “ and he remained with him, giving instruction to the “ Cymry in England, and to the Saxons ; and in Win“ chester he lies buried.”<sup>1</sup>

Geraint a registrar of national events.

Geraint appears, in the above extract, in the character of a “ collector of ancient records,” and though these records are mentioned as “ of poetry and bardism,” we may well presume that a person of such a turn of mind would not be indifferent to the memorials of national events. Indeed, in the volume alluded to, there are thirty-two poetic triplets assigned to him, in which are actually registered the achievements of the principal characters of British history from the earliest times down to that of Howel the Good, which, if the stanzas are genuine, prove that he did investigate the historical traditions and annals of his country.”<sup>2</sup>

An objection to the claim of Geraint
 considered.

There is only one objection to the supposition that Geraint might have been the writer of the “ Annales Cambriae,” namely, the dispute which is said to have existed at one time between his brother, the king of Glamorgan, and Owain, and which renders it improbable that he would in any degree further the interests of the latter.<sup>3</sup> But this is not a fatal objection. The <sup>1</sup> “ Arrangement of vocal poetical metres of Geraint Vardd Glas ” penes Iolo MSS. pp. 623, 624. Geraint is supposed by some to have been the same person with Asser Menevensis, a monk of St. David’s, who at the request of king Alfred went to reside with him as his preceptor, and was made bishop of Shirburne. A collection of moral and religious precepts attributed to him is printed in the Myv. Arch. vol. iii. pp. 100, &c.

<sup>3</sup> An account of this dispute and its settlement is given in the “ Genealogy of the kings of Glamorgan,” printed in the Iolo MSS. pp. 357, &c. It is there, however, attributed to Howel the Good and Morgan, which is evidently a mistake, for Edgar, who arbitrated between the parties, was a mere child when Howel died in 948 ; whereas Caradog positively asserts that it was his son Owain who committed the aggression upon Morgan’s territories, which was the cause of the dispute. See Myv. Arch. v. ii. p. 490.

last date in the chronicle is equivalent to A.D. 954, but the cause of the dispute did not arise until four years later, so that up to that time Geraint might have continued as attached to Owain, as Blegewryd, his brother, had been to Owain's father. Indeed, in some genealogical documents, Owain is represented as the father of Morgan, and therefore the father of Blegewryd and Geraint.<sup>1</sup> In that case it would not be strange that one son should continue to advocate the claims of his father, whilst another repudiated them. Besides, as both Morgan and Owain submitted to the arbitration of the English king, aided by a council of bishops and earls from Wales and Mercia, it would appear that the quarrel had arisen entirely from a mere misunderstanding, which was of a transient character, and was not at all grounded on any personal animosity.

In bringing forward these two names, we do not mean to fix the compilation of the chronicle upon either of them; we have no sufficient evidence to warrant our doing so. Our intention is rather to point out from history that there were men, even in that illiterate age, who were fully equal to the task, and not unlikely to have produced a register similar to the "Annales Cambriæ."

Intention
of the editor in mentioning
these two names.

Whoever the compiler was, he appears to have availed himself, in the prosecution of his task, of an Irish chronicle, which was also used by Tigernach, and by the compiler of the Annals of Ulster. The notices of Irish and Scottish events are, especially in the former part of the chronicle, disproportionately numerous, and such as could not be expected in a register founded

An Irish

compilation.

<sup>1</sup> This relationship is recorded in an important historical pedigree, said to have been transcribed from Ieuan Deulwyn's book, 1450-1490, and is confirmed by several other genealogies. In the "Genealogy of the kings of Glamorgan," however, Morgan is said to be the son of Howel.

upon a purely Cambrian basis. Of this description are the birth of St. Bridget (p. 3), the death of St. Patrick (ib.), the birth of St. Columcille (p. 4), the death of St. Bridget (ib.), mortality in Ireland (ib.), the death of Ciaran, abbot of Cluan (ib.), the death of Gabran, son of Dungart, king of Scotland (ib.), St. Columcille's departure for Britain (ib.), the death of Brenda, abbot of Birre (p. 5), the death of St. Columcille (ib.), the death of Aidan, son of Gabran (p. 6), the death of St. Kentigern (ib.), and the demolition of the fort of Altclyde, or Dunbarton (p. 14).

Intercourse between the ecclesiastics of Wales and Ireland.

In the sixth century there was much intercourse between the ecclesiastics of Ireland and those of Wales, which was not wholly discontinued down at least to the middle of the ninth century, as appears from the fact that Cydivor, abbot of Llanveithin, who died A.D. 883, had in his lifetime exhibited great concern for the welfare of the Scots of Ireland, and sent over six wise men of his college to instruct them.<sup>1</sup> There could, then, have been no difficulty on the part of Cambrian scholars in gaining access to Irish records during that interval of time, and if they were thus within their reach, there is every reason to suppose that they would duly avail themselves of them.

Native
documents.

But there were, moreover, documents of indigenous growth, which might, and no doubt were used in the compilation of this chronicle—those which the author of Nennius speaks of as "veteri libri veterum nostrorum."<sup>2</sup> Some of these would be the memorials of the national Gorsedd, whilst others would be family registers, or the genealogical title deeds, which every free-born Cymro was obliged to exhibit in order to establish his rights and privileges as a member of the commonwealth. It was very natural that the bards should add to certain names the principal deeds or events for which the bearers of those names were respectively distinguished. An aggregate of such pedigrees would afford very useful materials towards the compilation of a national chronicle.

The entries of events are but few in number, more especially towards the beginning of the chronicle. Indeed, all the notices we have relating to Britain, during its first century, are the death of the archbishop of York, the battle of Badon, and the battle of Camlan. Its second century contains twenty-eight entries, its third twenty-seven, its fourth twenty-nine, but in its fifth century there are as many as fifty-one, and seven during the remaining ten years. These several entries are likewise meagre, being just of that character which we would expect genealogical extracts, or fragments of family registers, to exhibit.

The entries few and scanty.

Owing to the great brevity with which these memorials are for the most part clothed, they too frequently occupy such detached and isolated positions as to make it impossible for us to identify them, independently of other and fuller authorities. If we depended solely on the statement of the "Annales," we should know nothing more of St. Patrick (p. 3), Ciaran (p. 4), Gildas (p. 5), Brendan (ib.), Gwrgi and Peredur (ib.), Gregory (p. 6), Kentigern (ib.), Ceredig (ib.), Belin (ib.), Brochvael (p. 7), Morgant (p. 8), Adomnan (ib.), Howel (p. 12), Laudent (p. 13), Iudguoll (ib.), Mervyn (ib.), Meurig (p. 14), Cerball (p. 15), Hyveidd (ib.), Gorchwyl (p. 16), Asser (ib.), and Aedelstan (p. 17), than simply that they died in certain years. The births as well as the deaths of some, as of St. Bridget (p. 3) and St. Columcille (p. 4), are recorded. Others have the names of their fathers added, as Gavran, son of Dungart (p. 4), Aeddan, son of Gavran (p. 6), Selim, son of Cynan (ib.), Iago, son of Beli (ib.), Beli, son of Elfin (p. 9), Tewdwr, son of Beli (ib.), Dyvnwal, son of Tewdwr (p. 10), Fernvail, son of Iudhail (ib.), Owain, son of Maredudd (p. 11), Trifun, son of Rein (p. 12), Aedd, son of Neill (p. 15), Llywarch, son of Hyveidd (p. 16), Hyveidd, son of Clydawg (p. 17), and Rhodri, son of Howel (p. 19). Others their office or rank, as Benignus, bishop (p. 3), Dunawd, king (p. 5), Dubricius, bishop (p. 6), Oswid, king of the Saxons (p. 8), Alfred, king of the Saxons (ib.), Osbrid, king of the Saxons (p. 9), Bede, priest (ib.), Owain, king of the Picts (ib.), Rhodri, king of the Britons (p. 10), Edwald, king of the Saxons (ib.), Lemoyd, king of the Picts (ib.), Cudberth, abbot (ib.), Arthen, king of Ceredigion (p. 11), Rein, king of the Dimetians (ib.), Cadell of Powys (ib.), Cynan, king (p. 12), Satur biu hail of Menevia (p. 13), Cemoyth, king of the Picts (p. 14), Jonathan, prince of Abergeleu (ib.), Albrid, king of Giuoys (p. 16), Cadell, king (ib.), Anarawd, king (p. 17), Aelfled, queen (ib.), Abloyc, king (ib.), Eneuris, bishop of Menevia (p. 18), and Howel, king of the Britons (ib.). In some instances the mode of death is specified; thus, Maelgwn, king of Gwynedd, died of a great mortality or plague (p. 4), Idris had his throat cut (p. 7), Cadwalader, son of Cadwallon, died of a plague (p. 8), Caradog, king of Gwynedd, had his throat cut by the Saxons (p. 11), Iudhail, king of Gwent, was killed by the men of Brecheiniog (p. 13), Meurig was killed by the Saxons (ib.), Cyngen had his throat cut by the Pagans (ib.), Gwgawn, king of Ceredigion, was drowned (p. 14), Dyvnwarth, king of Cornwall, was drowned (p. 15), Rhodri and Gwriad his son were strangled by the Saxons (ib.), Clydawg the king was slain (p. 17), Cadell, son of Arthrael, died of poison (p. 18). Idwal and his son Elized were killed by the Saxons (ib.), Cyngen, son of Elized, died of poison (ib.), Eadmund, king of the Saxons, had his throat cut (ib.), and Cadwgawn, son of Owain, had his throat cut by the Saxons (ib.). Again, in some cases, the place of death is mentioned; Selim, son of Cynan, fell in the battle of Caerleon (p. 6), Edwin and his two sons were slain in the battle of Meiceren (p. 7), Cadwallon fell in the battle of Cantscaul (ib.), Oswald, king of the Northmen, and Eoba, king of the Mercians, fell in the battle of Cocboy (ib.), Talargan, king of the Picts, was slain in the battle of Mygedawg (p. 9), Cyngen, king of Powys, died in Rome (p. 13), Howel died in Rome (p. 15), Rhodri was beheaded in Arwystli (p. 16), and bishop Lumberth died in Menevia (p. 18). The notices of some of the battles are likewise exceedingly brief; as, the battle of Arderydd (p. 5), the battle against Man (ib.), the slaughter of Caer Gai (p. 7), the battle of Mount Carno (p. 9), the battle of Rhuddlan (p. 11), the battle of Llanvaes (p. 12), the battle of Cetyll (p. 13), the battle of Finant (ib.), the battle of Bryn Onnen (p. 14), the battle of Banguoleu (ib.), the battle of Sunday in Mona (p. 15), the battle of Dinas Newydd (p. 17), and the battle of Brune (ib.); all of which are simply mentioned, without the least reference to any of the particulars that attended them. The same brevity is observed with respect to other events also; as, the deposition of Daniel of Bangor (p. 5), Edwin begins to reign (p. 6), Gwyddgar came, and returned not, on the calends of January (p. 7), the rise of a star (ib.), the slaughter of Pantha (ib.), the consecration of the church of Michael the Archangel (p. 9), a hot summer (ib.), the burning of Menevia (p. 11), Cadweithen was expelled (p. 14), Otter arrives (p. 17).

These circumstances imply very clearly that the facts of the chronicle were supposed to be well known at the time they were put together, and that the compiler did not intend so much to give a narrative of events as to arrange them conveniently in order of time.

Independent authorities do exist, such as Gildas, Nennius, Bede, the Genealogies of the Saints, the Triads, and the works of the Bards. In some instances the evidence is contemporaneous with the

of entries.

event, and thus it not only throws more light on the entries of the chronicle, but corroborates its general authenticity.

The battle
of Mount Badon.

The first entry of a civil or national character that occurs in it is that of the battle of Mount Badon, which is noticed by two contemporaries, Gildas and Taliesin. The former dates his own nativity from that event,<sup>1</sup> whilst the latter speaks of it in the following strain:—

“Woe to them, miserable ones, because of the battle of Badon,
Arthur, the head of the brave, his blades were red
with blood,
He inflicted on his enemies the vengeance of warriors,
That demanded the battle blood of the sovereign
of the North.”<sup>2</sup>

The author of the book of Nennius, who lived at a later period, represents the battle of Mount Badon as the twelfth which Arthur fought, and one in which 960 enemies fell in a single attack by his own hand.<sup>3</sup>

Maelgwn
Gwynedd.

Mailcun, king of Gwynedd, or Maelgwn Gwynedd, whose death is recorded under the year 547, and of whom the “Annales Cambriæ” give us no other account, is very severely handled by Gildas because of his sinful life.<sup>4</sup>

The battle
of Arder-
ydd.

The battle of Arderydd, A.D. 573, is mentioned in a Welsh poem, which is usually attributed to Merddin, a person of some distinction, who himself took an active part in it:—

“In the battle of Arderydd I wore the golden torques.”<sup>5</sup>

Constantine, whose "conversion to the Lord" is <sup>Constantine.</sup> noticed under 589, is in all probability identical with the "immundæ leænæ Damnoniæ tyrannicus catulus "Constantinus" of Gildas.<sup>1</sup>

Llywarch Hen says of king Dunawd, who died Dunawd. according to the "Annales," A.D. 595:—

" . . . . . Fiercely
Was it said in the pass of Llech, Dunawd, the son of Pabo, will never flee."<sup>2</sup>

Both Llywarch Hen and Taliesin sing the praises Urien. of Urien.<sup>3</sup> The former, indeed, in his Elegy on that Christian warrior, speaks also of the generosity of Rhun, in all probability the same person as "Run "filius Urbgen," who baptized Edwin, A.D. 626.

The same bard has an Elegy on Cadwallon,<sup>4</sup> who is Cadwallon. mentioned in the chronicle under 629, 630, and 631. The battle of Meiceren is evidently alluded to in the following stanza:—

"The army of Cadwallon encamped on Havren,
And on the farther side of Dygen,
And the devourers were burning Meigen."

Whether the battle of Cocboy, A.D. 644, is alluded <sup>The battle of Cocboy.</sup> to in a poem attributed to Taliesin,<sup>5</sup> where mention is made of—"The meeting of Corroy and Cocholyn," is perhaps doubtful; nor is it likely that "the chief

"of Bards" was living at this period.

The name of Brochvael, whose death is recorded <sup>Brochvael.</sup> under 662, occurs in Llywarch Hen's Elegy on Cynddylan, son of Cyndrwyn.<sup>6</sup>

The author of the book of Nennius speaks of <sup>Mention of Taliesin and Llywarch in Nennius</sup> Taliesin and Llywarch, the latter of whom he calls Bluchbard, and agrees with other authorities in representing them as having flourished at the time when the great contest between the Britons and Anglians in the sixth century was being carried on.<sup>1</sup>

Date of the book
of Nennius.

The first edition of Nennius appeared in 674;<sup>2</sup> presuming that the author was at that time thirty years of age, he must have been contemporary with the battle of Cocboy, the carnage of Caer Gai, and the slaughter of Pantha, all of which are described in the Historia Britonum nearly in the same words as in the "Annales Cambriæ." But as the genealogies in which these particulars occur refer to a date as late as 738, it follows that the editor, when that portion of the work was added, was a very old man, upwards of ninety years of age. Probably the compiler of the genealogies was another and a younger man, whose life did not reach any one of the three events mentioned, though it might take in the death of Cadwalader, which we may remark is noticed agreeably to the statement of the "Annales."

Era of Bede.

Bede was born in 674, and died 735. He was, therefore, coeval with all the occurrences that are mentioned in our chronicle as having happened during that interval. He notices, however, only two, namely, the death of Aelfrid and the death of Osred, the former of which he places in 705,<sup>3</sup> and the latter in 716,<sup>4</sup> the one a year later, the other a year earlier than the respective dates of the "Annales Cambriæ."

<sup>1</sup> "Tunc Talhaearn Cataguen in poemate claruit, et Neirin, et Taliesin, et Bluchbard, et Cian, qui vocatur Guenith Guant, simul uno tempore in poemate Britannico claruerunt."—Hist. Brit. § 62. The genuineness of the Ancient British Poems of Aneurin, Taliesin, Llywarch Hen, and Merddin, has been ably vindicated by Sharon Turner, Esq., F.A.S., London, 1803.

"Quando Gratianus Æquantius consul fuit in Roma, qui tunc a consulibus Romanorum totus orbis regebatur, Saxones a Guorthegirno, anno post Domini Passionem trecentesimo quadregesimo septimo suscepti sunt: ad hunc quem (quo) nunc scribimus annum sexcentesimo quadregesimo septimum numeramus."

Asser Menevensis also, who was invited to the court of Alfred about 885, and closed his mortal career in 908, lends his testimony in support of a few particulars. The battle of Bryn Onnen is described by him at some length. The place where it occurred was called in English Æscedun, "quod Latine 'mons 'fraxini' interpretatur." Mention is made of archbishop Novis, whom Asser calls his relation; also of Hemeid, Rhodri, Meurig, and Anarawd, all of whom are noticed in the "Annales."<sup>1</sup>

The compiler of the chronicle himself could not have been long after Asser. The events recorded in the latter portion must, therefore, have been well known to him, some of them, it may be, having fallen under his own personal observation. We are thus fully justified in receiving them as genuine facts of history.

There is some reason to think that our chronicle was originally written in Welsh, and that in its present form it is only a translation. This supposition is founded on the Welsh words and phrases which appear in it as if left untranslated; such as "Gueith Camlann" (p. 4), "Aidan Map Gabran" (p. 6), "Gueith Caer Legion" (ib.), "Gueith Gart-mailauc" (p. 9), "Gueith Mocetauc" (ib.), "Gueith Hirford" (p. 10), "Gueith Lannmaes" (p. 12), "Cat Brin Onnen" (p. 14), "Gueith Bannguolou" (ib.), "Gueith Diu Sul in Mon" (p. 15), "Aed Map Neill" (ib.), "Gueit Conguoy digal Rotri a Deo" (ib.), "Gueith Dinmeir" (p. 16), "Gueith Dinas Neguid" (p. 17). The Welsh compiler would seem to have turned Irish entries into proper Cymraeg, as "Mac Gabran" into "Map Gabran," "Mac Neill" into "Map Neill," though such instances have not been further translated into Latin.

Supposed
traces of a misapprehension on the part
of the translator.

We would feign detect traces of a misapprehension of the meaning of certain Welsh words on the part of the translator. Such, we think, appear in the statement relative to Arthur at the battle of Badon, that he carried the cross of Christ "in humeros suos." It is very probable that the original word was "ysgwyd," clypeus, and that the translator mistook it for "ysgwydd," humerus, and rendered it accordingly. The mistake would be very easily made at that early period, when there was no difference whatever in the orthographical forms of the words, both being written iscuit. Nennius seems to have made the same mistake, but Geoffrey of Monmouth appears to have caught the right meaning, though somewhat amplified, when he says, "Humeris quoque suis clypeum vocabulo Priwen, in quo imago Sanctæ Mariæ genetricis impicta."

The Welsh
names
etymologically
formed.

The forms of the Welsh names are purely etymological, such as prevailed in early times, enabling the philologist to identify at a glance their component parts; unlike the phonetic character of our more modern orthography, where the initial consonant, in compounds as well as in separate words, is affected by that which goes before.

Chro-nology.

The chronology of this document is designated by the repetition of the word "annus" for each successive year, whether blank or otherwise, whilst every tenth year is marked x., xx., &c. It has not, however, been considered necessary to print every "annus" as it occurs in the manuscript, where no event is recorded. The first and last only of the blank years that intervene between each entry of an occurrence have been inserted. From a comparison of dates assigned to many of the events noticed in it by other writers, it would appear that the era on which its chronology rests would concur with the year 444 of the Incarnation, though there is no reason given for this particular date.

The chronicle that comes next under our notice is "Annales ab orbe condito adusque A.D. 1286," marked B. in the present edition. This is a manuscript in folio, written in triple columns, in a hand of the close of the thirteenth century, without title or introduction, on certain fly leaves prefixed to an abridged copy of Domesday Book in the Public Record Office, in the custody of the Master of the Rolls, formerly in charge of the king's remembrancer in the Court of the Exchequer. In all probability it was written A.D. 1286, which is the date of its latest entry, and which was but a few years after the death of Llywelyn, the last sovereign prince of Wales.

But though as a transcript it may be of that date, there is reason to suppose that it is not originally the work of one period, but that it was compiled by different persons at different times.

The basis of this chronicle, down to the empire of Leo I., A.D. 457, is derived from the chapter of the Fifth Book of Isidore's Origines, apparently through the medium of Bede's shorter chronicle, with some insertions relating to general ecclesiastical history from another source, and with the further addition of a few brief notices taken from Geoffrey of Monmouth's British History.

The chronological computation of this part of the chronicle is taken from the length of reign of the several emperors, which seems to mark it as the work of one man, whilst the reference to Geoffrey of Monmouth would place the date of compilation subsequently to the middle of the twelfth century.

From A.D. 457 it agrees nearly with A. until that copy ends; and no doubt this was the register principally made use of by the compiler, though it is evident that he had other sources of information at hand as well, which enabled him to identify the Dunawd, who died in 597 as "filius Pabo," or to fix the church of S. Michael that was consecrated in 718 "in monte Gargano." He, moreover, clothes the entries generally in his own language; thus, where A. has A.D. 607, "Aidan Map Gabran "moritur," in B. it is rendered, "Aidan filius Gawran "obiit." It may be that both versions are but separate translations of the same Welsh original, somewhat modified or diversified according to the additional information which the respective writers may have possessed.

Chronology of the latter portion.

From the time of its concurrence with manuscript A. down to 1097, each successive year is noted by the word "annus," but without the numerical indication of decades. At this date the common era is adopted, and continued to the end of the chronicle.

Apparently not written by the same person.

It would appear, then, as if a fresh hand were employed upon the register from A.D. 1097 down to the beginning of the thirteenth century, when the entries, which were somewhat brief before, become much fuller, thus indicating another change. The latter portion was probably composed at the monastery of Strata Florida, to which it frequently refers, the very last entry, indeed, being a notice of a conflagration which occurred there.

The writers probably Welsh ecclesiastics.

From the evident partiality displayed by the writers for the Cambrian interest, there can be little doubt that they were Welshmen, probably ecclesiastics, inmates of some of the religious houses that had sprung up in different parts of the country, and more especially of Strata Florida.

The chronology down to 1098 more or less false.

As justly observed in the Preface to the Monumenta Historica Britannica, p. 93, the chronology of the portion derived from Isidore is, by the omission or confusion of different persons, utterly false, inasmuch as it would place the accession of Leo in the year 397, instead of the year 457; the arrival of Hengist in the year 409, instead of the year 449; and the change of Easter Day, the first incident of manuscript A. in the year 420, instead of the year 453. In like manner the chronology of the succeeding portion, noted by the repetition of the word "annus," owing apparently to the misreckoning of the intervening or blank years, and the want of a check similar to that of numbering the tenth year, observed in manuscript A., is constantly getting wrong. Thus assuming its agreement with manuscript A. at 453, it will be found to have lost seven years at A.D. 954, where that copy ends, and to be eight years short of the true reckoning at A.D. 1098, where the common era is adopted,

The third manuscript is distinguished in the present volume by the letter C. This is "Annales ab orbe condito adusque A.D. 1288," two years later than manuscript B. It is in the Cottonian collection, Domitian, A. 1, in small octavo, written in a hand of the end of the thirteenth century, probably in the very year which terminates the copy.

Of this chronicle, the portion extending from the creation to the empire of Heraclius, A.D. 614-40, consists, like the early part of manuscript B., of extracts from Isidore's Origines, apparently through the medium of Bede. Indeed the writer, in the following entry, expressly assigns the compilation to the Saxon priest, A.D. 735, "Beda presbyter moritur, qui hunc librum cronicum annuatim composuit." It contains also a few brief extracts from Geoffrey of Monmouth, and likewise a portion of the notices contained in manuscript A. during the same period.

The citation from Geoffrey of Monmouth here, as in the case of the corresponding portion of manuscript B., forbids us to assign an earlier date to the composition than the middle of the twelfth century.

From the empire of Heraclius forward it agrees nearly with manuscript A., till that copy ceases, and scripts A. generally with manuscript B. to the year 1203, from and B. which circumstance it is evident that the compiler down to A.D. 1203. or compilers of that portion had access to the two other copies, and made use of them in preparing his or their own chronicle.

The latter part wholly different. After the year 1203 it becomes wholly different from B., and has fewer and briefer notices of Wales, whilst these have mostly an air of partiality towards the English. We conclude, therefore, that this portion, occupying eighty-five years, was the work of a distinct party, evidently in the interest of the English king.

Notices of English affairs interposed in the manuscript. From about the year 1016 to the year 1200 this manuscript has some leaves of parchment interposed, containing brief notices of English affairs. To the year 1135 they are abridged from Florence of Worcester and his continuator; afterwards they are taken from another source, and have frequent mention of the bishops of Worcester. Each notice has a reference to its intended place in the text; but these references are very faulty throughout as to time, and are wholly omitted in the present volume.

Chronology. The chronology of manuscript C., like that of manuscript B., is founded, first, on the length of reign of the several emperors, and afterwards on the repetition of the word "annus." The former portion, from causes similar to those already described relative to manuscript B., is utterly erroneous; the latter portion, down to A.D. 1135, is subject to the same kind of error as that manuscript; but after that date the "annus" is more carefully noted, and, as far as can be ascertained, the chronology is generally right.

Basis of the present edition. As manuscript A. is evidently the most ancient, and therefore the most historically valuable of the three copies which we have thus considered, it has been adopted as the basis, as far as it goes, of the present edition, being collated with manuscripts B. and C. When manuscript A. ceases, manuscript B. has been used as the text, collated with manuscript C. Such additional matter as was afforded by collation, and would cohere with the text, has been inserted throughout in brackets, except that portion which in the copies B. and C. relates to events preceding the middle of the fifth century. This preliminary matter, inasmuch as it was prefixed at a much later period to the original form of the chronicle, as it stands in manuscript A., and is consequently worthless in a historical point of view, has been altogether omitted from the text, but is nevertheless inserted at the close of the Preface.

The variations of the different copies are inserted at the foot of the page, and are referred to by a <sup>Various readings.</sup> small numeral; and when more words than one are meant, a tick is used to indicate the termination of the passage in the text.

So long as manuscript A. continues, a numeral has <sup>Marginal dates.</sup> been supplied for each "annus" which is mentioned, and in order to have an approximation to the common era, the date 444, as already stated, has been assumed as concurrent with its first "annus," and the Christian year has been constantly affixed to each register of events down to 954, which would then correspond with the year 510 of that manuscript. From that period forward, the chronology of the manuscripts B. and C. is so irregular and erroneous, that it has been found impossible to reduce it to order; wherefore the real dates have been sought for, as far as they were attainable, from other and more trustworthy authorities which notice the same events, such as the Saxon chronicle and Florence of Worcester, until we come to 1097, when manuscript B. adopts the year of Christ, and is thus followed in the margin. The numerals opposite to the intermediate years of chronicle C., wherever they occur during this period, have been mainly conjectured from the position they hold relatively to the specified dates of B.

Why there are no marginal references.

Owing to the brevity of diction in which so many of the notices, especially in the former part of the chronicle, have been clothed, it was found inconvenient to annex marginal references to each. Rather, therefore, than that there should be any incompleteness, or want of uniformity in this respect, it was deemed advisable to omit them altogether. It is presumed, however, that the fulness of the index, together with the marginal dates, will make up in a great degree for the deficiency, which otherwise might have proved somewhat disadvantageous.

The style.

We may remark upon the style of the work, that in many places it is extremely faulty, defective, and ungrammatical. A few such inaccuracies have been pointed out in the foot notes, but in general the text has been printed as in the manuscript, a course which has been adopted lest in any way we should inadvertently alter the sense of the words, or modify the peculiarity of the language, which the compilers may have designedly used.<sup>1</sup>

Venientes autem monachi ad curiam Romanam, quod regi firmiter et cum juramento promiserant, neglexerunt, et dissensione inter eos habita, imo mortuo quinque ex ipsis, in proposito sicut promiserant permanserunt. Dominus autem papa audiens episcopum valde esse secularem et a pluribus diffamatum, priorem cum reliquis modis omnibus induxit ut magistrum Stephanum Anglicum quendam theologum valde literatum eligerent. Eo autem electo, dominus papa eum honorifice consecravit, et cum privilegiis et pallio in Angliam ad sedem suam transmisit. Quod cum regi innotuisset, omnes monachos Cantuariensis ecclesiæ de regno suo expulit, nec unus eorum in toto regno Angliæ remansit. Et introitum archiepiscopo et suis in regnum inhibuit. Dominus autem papa, factis pluribus monitionibus domino regi ut archiepiscopum reciperet, rege semper in malitia perseverante, totam Angliam sub generali interdicto conclusit, ne aliqua divina in ecclesiis celebrarentur excepto solo baptismo. Maredut filius Resi Crych homagium et fidelitatem domino regi fecit. Walenses propter hoc valde irati fuerunt, et dominus Lewelinus filius Grifut et omnes Sudwalenses cum magno exercitu ad terram prædicti Maredut de Stratewy accesserunt, et eam omnino præter castra ejus sibi subjugaverunt. Postea apud Kedweli Walenses castrametati sunt, domos et villas præter castrum Kedweli combusserunt dominus Maredut et dominus Patric cum multis armatis Anglicis de Kermerdin in Walensibus subito irruerunt et pugna valida inter eos fuit; et de Walensibus et de Anglicis quidam fuerunt vulnerati, quidam occisi, et dominus Maredut juxta pontem vulnere pessimo fuit vulneratus. Tandem Walensibus prævalentibus, et relictis ibidem corporibus Anglicorum, Maredut et Anglici ad villam Kermerdin cum magno dedecore fugerunt. Inter mortuos vir nobilis de Arustly David ap Howel cecidit et apud Stratam Floridam cum magno planctu sepulturæ traditur. Eodem anno circa Nativitatem Beati Johannis Baptistæ magna fuit discordia inter Anglicos et Francos in regno Angliæ, et Anglici per consilium comitum, baronum, et optimatum totius regni omnes Francos de finibus et terminis eorum expulerunt. De optimatibus vero et divitibus Angliæ de veneno ex parte Francorum facto multi Anglici perierunt. Præterea David filius Grifini juvenis in armis splendidissimus et in equo fortissimus cum paucis de Nortwallia, et Maredut filius Owein et Ris Bethan cum magno exercitu per duos dies Maynour castrametati fuerunt, et tertia nocte, scilicet die Mercurii proxima ante Nativitatem Beatæ Mariæ, castra sua juxta Kilgerran posuerunt. Illo die dominus Maredut filius Resi Crich et dominus Patric senescallus domini regis cum omnibus armatis viris de Kedeweli, de Kermerdin, de Pembrok, de Ros, et de Kemeis apud Aberteiui cum magna superbia fuerunt congregati. Post horam vero nonam Anglici de Aberteivi per acies suas usque Kilgerran pervenerunt, et juxta villam Kilgerran Anglici et Walenses fortiter et crudeliter pugnaverunt. Tandem Walenses Dei auxilio prævaluerunt, et Anglicos in fugam vertērunt, et cadavera mortuorum cum equis armatis ibidem reliquerunt. In illa hora <sup>1</sup> dominus Patric Walterus Malifant, miles fortis et strenuus de Pembroc, et alii milites nuper de Anglia venientes, turpissima morte corruerunt. Maredut cum Anglicis ad castellum Kilgerran vix evasit, qui per infidelitatem suam totam Walliam perturbavit. In Anglia constituti sunt xii. pares.'

1259. Annus <sup>2</sup> MCCLIX. Dominus Lewelinus filius Grifini consilium habuit cum nobilioribus Walliæ apud Arustily, et ibi <sup>3</sup> die Mercurii proxima ante Pentecosten convictus fuit dominus Maredut filius Ris de infidelitate, et a dicto domino Lewelino tentus, qui in carcere fuit apud Crukeid usque ad Natale Domini proximum, et tunc liberatus recipiendo ab ipso primogenitum in obsidem, et duo castella sua Dinewour et Castelh Nowid, cum duabus provinciis eis adjacentibus. 1260. Annus <sup>1</sup>MCCLX. In die Sancti Georgii Martyris combusta est villa de Trefetland a dominis de Keri et de Kedewic. Eodem anno, die Sancti Kenelmi Martyris, tres vigiles Anglici natione qui custodiebant castellum de Buelth tradiderunt hominibus illud domini Lewelini filii Grifini circa finem noctis pro magna summa pecuniæ, et hoc fuit propter odium infernale quod dicti vigiles habebant erga notarium ejusdem castelli qui erat Anglicus. Quo audito et divulgato, statim Resus Bethan cum suo exercitu et omnes nobiles et bene in armis valentes fere totius Sudwalliæ venerunt, et statim unanimi et communi consilio, quicquid cremabile erat in illo castello igni tradiderunt, lapides vero solotenus destruxerunt, ita quod in brevi lapis super lapidem ibidem non possit reperiri. Venit etiam tunc dominus Owinus filius Maredut cum suis omnibus fidelibus et subjectis ad pacem et fidelitatem domini Lewelini, qui statim Madocum filium dicti Owini de carcere liberavit, et liberum tradidit, et centum tres libras eidem donavit.

Eodem etiam anno circa Kalendas Augusti jurata sunt treugæ per duos annos inter dominum regem et regnum ex una parte et dominum Lewelinum et suos ex altera parte. Ita quod sine transgressione treugarum liceat eidem Lewelino defendere se et sua contra omnes nolentes literas treugas tenere vel firmas habere. Eodem anno dominus Edwardus primogenitus Henrici regis perrexit ad transmarinas partes cum flore juventutis totius regni, ubi tenuit torneamentum contra Gallos, qui unanimiter convenerunt et dictum dominum Edwardum cum suis de campo virtute dissimili ire propulerunt, et omnes quos habebant generosos sonipedes cum rebus aliis dicti Galli sibi vendicaverunt, et hoc semel et bis et iterum. Idem vero dominus Edwardus rediit in Angliam, et invenit patrem suum in Alba Turre Londoniæ, timuerat enim sibi a XII. paribus equorum providentiæ commiserat regnum gubernandum, et hoc eum valde pœnituerat. Item eodem anno Tartari occupaverunt Ierosolimitanum regnum, destructis omnibus regnis Orientis et interfectis omnibus Saracenis, venerunt etiam usque ad fines Romani imperii, quorum timor occupaverat omnem Christianitatem.<sup>1</sup> [Interfecti fuerunt plures Walenses apud Lanhuadeyn in vigilia Beati Laurentii. Tunc dominus Rogerus et Humfrei de Bun Junior cum flore juventutis totius Marchiæ intraverunt ruinos muros de Kevenlis cum magno apparatu molientes restaurare fracturas murorum. Quod audiens dominus Lewelinus filius Grifini princeps Walliæ conducens secum omnes nobiliores Walliæ accessit ad eos et circumspecta obsidione vallavit ipsos quousque fame et inedia ducti petierunt sibi cum armis tamen inermes licentiam recedendi, quod pius princeps pietate ductus concedens factum est. Autem cum essent Owein filius Madoc et pars exercitus ceperunt castrum de Conoclas in vigilia Sancti Thomæ Apostoli non vi aut bello sed castrenses metu præteriti reddiderunt se cum castro præ timore machinarum; ceperunt etiam castellum de Trefeclaud de Nortun et de Llanondras.<sup>1</sup> [Magna fuit discordia inter dominum Eadwardum filium Henrici regis Angliæ primogenitum et barones Angliæ. Eodem anno in æstate coadunati sunt omnes comites et barones fere omnes cum domino Lewelino principe contra Edwardum, et ceperunt omnia castella et universas civitates totius Angliæ excepto castello de Wyndelesor. Et dominus Lewelinus cum magno exercitu et apparatu accessit ad castrum de Disserth circa Kalendas Augusti, et illud bello cepit et statim solotenus destruxit, ita ut non ibi lapis super lapidem in brevi inveniretur. Cepit etiam die Sancti Michaelis castellum de Diganwy in regno fortissimum, prout vulgariter dicebatur, non vi aut bello sed castellani acerrima acerbitate et amaritudine famis afflicti consilium inierunt cum dicto principe de vita sibi servanda, se ipsos cum castro eidem dantes. In tantum enim afflixerat eos famis acerbitas quod oportuit eos inedia ducti famem extinguere carnibus equorum et etiam canum suorum, ut fidem domino regi servarent illæsam, quod si pro rege cœlesti facerent mercedem meruissent habere æternam. Eadem etiam æstate venit dominus Grifinus filius Wennonwen ad pacem domini Lewilini faciens ei homagium humiliter genuflexo. Qui restituit omnes terras suas quas idem princeps antea occupaverat. Idem vero Grifinus assumens secum omnes viros et ballivos de Powis castrum de Weidgrut debellavit, cepit, et solo adæquavit. In finem vero ipsius anni venerunt plures barones sibi coadunatis ad dominum Lewelinum et castellum de Redenor ceperunt, et solotenus cum tota villa destruxerunt. ASCENSIO DOMINI. Ascension day:
the 40th day after Easter. 103.

AVERIA. Cattle. Spelman.

"Vix pacificatus Lewelin xxx. obsides regi dedit, et, ut perhibent, vii. millia ave-ria cum equis pluribus et canibus et avibus promisit." 67.

B.

BACULUS. A pastoral staff ; the staff given at the ceremony of investiture. Bagl. W.

"Rex concessit ut nunquam per donatio-nem baculi pastoralis vel annuli quisquam
de episcopatu vel abbatia per regem vel
quamlibet laicam manum in Angliam inves-tiretur." 31.

BALISTA. A warlike engine to shoot darts or stones ; a cross-bow.

"Ricardus rex Anglorum in quadam ex-peditione apud Lymoses ietu balistæ percussus diem clausit supremum." 62.

BALLIVUS. A bailiff. According to Sir Edward Coke, bailiff is an old Saxon word, which signifies a keeper or protector ; and though there are several officers called bailiffs, whose offices and employments seem quite different, yet something of keeping or protection belongs to them all. Co. Litt.
61. b. Bac. Abr. 361. Hence the sheriff is considered as bailiff
to the Crown ; and his county of which he hath the care, and in which he is to execute the king's

I.

IDUS, IDES. With the ancient Romans these were eight days in every month, being the eight days immediately after the nones.
In the months of March, May,
July, and October these eight days began at the 8th day of the month, and continued to the 15th day ; in other months they began at the 6th day, and lasted

to the 13th. But it is only the last day that is called Ides, the first of these days is the eighth Ides, the second day the seventh, the third day the sixth, i.e. the eighth, seventh, or sixth day before the Ides; and so of the rest of the days. Wherefore when we speak of the Ides of any month in general, it is to be taken for the 15th or 13th of the month mentioned.

"Henricus rex transfretavit de Anglia in Normanniam iv<sup>o</sup> Idus Januarii." 46.
